

PROUD TO BE UNION

What is a Union?

A union is an organisation of workers who join together to achieve common goals and to promote a shared vision, based on fairness and social justice, of the society they aspire to live in.

Unions advance workers' rights and provide support to members, including by negotiating: wages; conditions of employment; flexible work; career opportunities; safe work practices; and workplace policies and procedures.

We achieve, as an organised group of workers, far more than we can as individuals.

What is the Public Service Association of New South Wales (the PSA)?

The PSA is the leading voice in promoting the value of the work you do.

Established in 1899, we are an active, member driven union that asserts its members' interests and advances the value of public services for the people of New South Wales.

The PSA is not affiliated with any political party.

In 2015 a longstanding ban on donating any PSA resources to any political parties or candidates was reintroduced, having been lifted in 2008.

We represent a diverse range of employees working under both the State and federal systems, including those working in public schools, universities, TAFE, corrective services and state owned corporations, and those working in specific sectors such as the disability sector.

Why is organized collective action so important?

We have power in numbers, and strength in unity.

The PSA proudly promotes democratic, membership-based decision-making at all levels.

Delegate and activist structures in the workplace provide a member-oriented focus around how we organise and build power.

It is rewarding to know that as a PSA member you contribute to creating a fairer workplace for all.

Together we fight to improve wages and entitlements, as well as job security, innovative workplace practices and rights at work.

Are there additional benefits to being PSA?

Yes! PSA members enjoy coverage under our Journey Insurance policy for injuries sustained travelling to or from work, which the Government removed from workers' compensation laws in 2012. The benefit of a Provident Fund (providing up to $3,500 to your nominee in the event of your death) is also included in membership fees.

PSA fees are fully tax deductible.

PSA members may also access free legal advice for non-industrial matters (such as drafting a will) and discounted banking services and loans with SCU Credit Union (conditions apply).

In addition, PSA members can access an additional 12 days of paid leave every two years to attend union training courses and other union activities.

My conditions of employment are great and I get a pay rise every year.

Why would I bother being PSA?

Your annual pay rise is not automatic. Instead the PSA wins these increases by negotiating with the Government and other employers on behalf of its members.

You are a beneficiary of the collective strength of some 38,000 of your colleagues across the state who are PSA members. Only through our collective strength as a union are we able to negotiate on a level playing field with the Government and other employers.

This is why your colleagues need you to join your union, the PSA, to advance and protect these conditions for which we have collectively fought long and hard.

What else does the PSA achieve for its members?

The PSA continues to build on its long and proud history acting on behalf of members in all aspects of their working lives.

In just the last ten years the PSA has recorded many landmark and historic achievements, including securing permanency for long term temporary staff, various advances for women in the workplace (such as maternity leave, lactation breaks and domestic violence leave), and successful work health and safety prosecutions in a number of different agencies.

The PSA also leads the way in campaigning on issues such as flexible work, workplace bullying, privatisation, and securing pay equity.

Did you know?

Studies show that union membership may improve life satisfaction by:

- affording members opportunities to identify, discuss, and act to improve their working conditions, heightening self-determination and reducing feelings of alienation
- providing a greater sense of security at work for members, knowing they have the protection of their union
- offering opportunities for social interaction and integration, reducing feelings of loneliness and isolation
- enhancing the participatory benefits associated with more engaged democratic citizenship.

How Do I Join the PSA?

Securely join online for as little as $3.40 per week at <https://membership.psa.asn.au/join>, or call our friendly team on 1300 772 679.

And if you include the details of the colleague who assisted you to join online, we'll give them a $75 gift card for taking the time to explain why you too should be Proud to be PSA.
