

CPSU NSW urges unprecedented measures to protect LRS staff during COVID-19 crisis

The CPSU NSW has written to NSW Land Registry Service Head of People and Culture, Brad Griffiths, urging the organisation to act early and implement a range of unprecedented measures to protect the health and financial wellbeing of staff during the COVID-19 health crisis. Click here to view a copy of our letter HERE.

The union has encouraged LRS to take its lead from the NSW Government and support staff with additional leave arrangements to mitigate the spread of COVID-19.

Governments, non-government organisations and businesses in Australia and around the world are conscious that COVID-19 will place enormous pressure on budgets and profitability, and many are responding admirably by introducing support measures to assist employees weather the current crisis.

The CPSU NSW is ready to work with employers to discuss and tailor strategies to ensure best practice initiatives are implemented, and employees are both safe at work and secure at home.

For further advice, contact Kirra Jackson (0438 416 615) or Thane Pearce (0408 223 276) at the CPSU NSW on 1300 772 67

Not a member? Join today.

UNION IS STRENGTH!

